Creating and exchanging knowledge that promotes understanding of the human experience.

Individualized Major student Paula Granger during the Summer 2007 IUPUI To Mexico with Love program with ESL students from her class at La Lagunilla Community Center in Cuernavaca, Mexico.
Welcome to the IU School of Liberal Arts, the home of the humanities and the social sciences at IUPUI where learning and research are advanced in service to our community and the world. The application of knowledge to societal needs is at the foundation of all we do in educating an informed and thoughtful citizenry.

Our geographers work with faculty of the School of Medicine, using new technologies to map disease and other health issues. Our communication studies faculty partner with the World Health Organization to develop training programs that increase medication and treatment compliance in countries suffering from the HIV/AIDS epidemic. Working together Anthropology and School of Public and Environmental Affairs faculty have adopted the "Inside-Out" teaching program, in collaboration with the Plainfield Correctional Facility, teaching college level courses to IUPUI students and inmates that are transforming both populations.

In 2007, IUPUI was recognized with three major national awards for its Civic Engagement. At the heart of this achievement are the students, staff and faculty of the IU School of Liberal Arts. And they aren't just engaged in Indianapolis. Faculty and students have begun active partnerships with their counterparts at Moi University in Eldoret, Kenya. In the spring of 2007, the first meeting of the Social Science Research Network took place in Eldoret which has resulted in the launch of several collaborative research projects between faculties of both universities. With our growing international involvement comes the commitment to provide increased study abroad opportunities for our students.

There is not sufficient room in this report to describe all the ways we are engaged with our community. Please visit http://liberalarts.iupui.edu to learn more. Oh, and by the way, tell us how you like the site--it's new.

As you review the following pages, please understand that you are as much a partner in our successes as those who receive support for their work from your generosity. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Robert W. White
Dean, IU School of Liberal Arts at IUPUI
Several years ago, the School undertook an innovative partnership between its Museum Studies Program, other IUPUI schools, and local cultural institutions, bringing in new faculty who hold joint appointments with the Eiteljorg Museum, the Indianapolis Museum of Art and the Children's Museum. Termed Public Scholars, these faculty are charged with enhancing collaborations between and among the member organizations.

The Public Scholars concept has been highly successful in practice, and in 2007, three new faculty, Dr. Ronda Henry, Dr. Bessie House-Soremekun and Dr. Modupe Labode were hired as Public Scholars in African American and African Diaspora Studies with joint appointments in English, History and Political Science. They are part of a university-wide Commitment to Excellence initiative and have already begun their community collaborations. Dr. Jennifer Mikulay, also joined the faculty in 2007 as Public Scholar of Visual Culture. To date, eight faculty hold Public Scholar status and their work on campus and in the community is groundbreaking. Museum Studies, Education, and Children's Museum faculty member Elee Wood, for example, uses the museum's exhibits to teach education students how to incorporate museum learning into school curricula, capturing the excitement of discovery and using it to energize Indiana's younger students when they become teachers with classrooms of their own.

We're Engaged!

The first "IU" class offered as an extension program in Indianapolis was an Economics course in the late 19th century. Liberal Arts courses and programs have been consistently offered in Indianapolis for over 100 years, all of which have been integral to the economic development of the region. We continue, unabated, to provide some of the most well developed and civically integrated programs offered by IUPUI. Learn and Shop and Weekend College originated in Liberal Arts during the 1970s, and innovations continue through service learning, community-oriented research, and faculty appointment structures. Moreover, many student scholarships, including the Masarachia Scholars Program, the Mary Crisler and the Loretta Lunsford Scholarships, require recipients to serve their communities and engage in independent service projects with faculty. Students and faculty are active contributors to knowledge and understanding and to the economic well being of Indiana through an impressive range of programs and initiatives.

Community collaborations have been the touchstone of Liberal Arts programs from the beginning. Indeed, because of the School's origins in the city of Indianapolis, its mission of research, teaching and service have formed in direct response to community demand.
Engaged Departments

Since 2005, the university has provided additional funding to support departments that promote civic engagement through service learning classes and research activities. Half of the departments with this designation are in the School of Liberal Arts. They are the Department of Communication Studies and the Department of World Languages and Cultures. The Departments of Anthropology and Geography work together with the IU School of Law-Indianapolis on community mapping and research activities focusing on the east side neighborhoods of Indianapolis. In an important collaboration between the city and the Department of History, the West Street Cultural Heritage Trail project is one facet of a planned multi-year research and community service partnership exploring, documenting, and helping city planners present community history along Indianapolis’ Cultural Trail.

Engaged Students

Students who exemplify IUPUI’s tradition of excellence in service to the community are honored with the William M. Plater Medallion for Civic Engagement from the IUPUI Center for Service and Learning. Two Liberal Arts majors were among those who were honored in 2007.

Charmayne Champion-Shaw
Graduate Student, Applied Communication
Charmayne’s passion is “to help other Native Americans succeed in higher education.” Inspired by time she spent with her father, she has done much to achieve her goal. She was recognized for working with Dr. Johnny Flynn, lecturer in religious studies and a leading scholar and teacher of Native American religions, to put together the first Native American Education Conference at IUPUI, held in September of 2006. Charmayne also served as the president of Native American Student Alliance and was appointed by Governor Mitch Daniels to the “Diverse Indiana” committee, working to make Indiana a more welcoming place for all its residents.

When speaking of all the work she does, she explains, “I do this for my children and their children, my future grandchildren, knowing that they will also follow this path because it is our family’s legacy.”

Amelia Grant
BA 2007 History
As a highly active student since high school, Amelia Grant enjoys the opportunity to juggle classes, work, sports, and community service. In September of 2005, in response to Hurricane Katrina, Amelia took her first trip to Waveland and Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, to aid in the relief. Deeply moved by the disaster, Amelia started searching for more ways she could help. After returning to IUPUI, she and another resident assistant began "700 envelopes," a fundraising initiative for hurricane victims.

During the summer of 2007, Amelia volunteered at Foundation Hope in Mississippi to aid those affected by Katrina. She explains, “This was an incredible growing experience that moved me past the volunteer stage, and placed me in the career stage of my life.” Amelia not only volunteered as a student, but will continue to do so well beyond her last day of class.
Private gift support for the School during 2007 totaled $1,259,138.80 in outright gifts from 1,476 donors. The Center on Philanthropy, one of the premier centers housed in the School of Liberal Arts raised $842,051 from 330 donors. External research funds in the form of grants and contracts support the critical research initiatives that create new knowledge. In 2007, Liberal Arts faculty generated $6,813,310 in external funding. The Center on Philanthropy received $40 million in permanent core operating support from the Lilly Endowment.

As a service to the growing Hispanic population in central Indiana, the School of Liberal Arts annually partners with the Indiana Department of Education, IPS and Township schools and other local colleges to host Mapping Education Through Achievement (META). Supported by gifts from National City Bank, Lewes and Kappes, Attorneys, and Papa John’s Pizza, META serves over 300 students and their families, providing bi-lingual “how to” sessions on applying to colleges. This program has become so successful that there are annual waiting lists for students who wish to attend.

The Institute for American Thought welcomed the inauguration of the new Center for Ray Bradbury Studies in 2007, under the direction of Professor of English William Touponce.

A $480,000 grant from the Lilly Corporate Foundation to the Indiana Center for Intercultural Communication launched research into communications barriers to medical compliance, especially among diabetic patients.

The Lilly Endowment continued support of the Center for the Study of Religion and American Culture with a grant of $850,000 for its Young Scholars in American Religion program, a national project which assists early career scholars in the improvement of their teaching and research and in the development of professional communities.

The Plater Medallion recipients, are among the numerous Liberal Arts students who combine education with service, community involvement, and a strong commitment to helping others. Another such student is now-alumnus Greg Pottorff (BA 2007, History/Political Science), who as a student athlete took every chance to volunteer that came his way. An IUPUI Sam H. Jones Community Scholar, he volunteered for Keep Indianapolis Beautiful, Planned Parenthood, and Riley Children’s Hospital and served the campus as a member of the Student Athletic Advisory Board.

Another Community Scholar, Spanish major Miranda Martinez-Cruz mentored Spanish classes and translated documents for the Keep Indianapolis Beautiful project. Martinez-Cruz also completed an internship at Wishard Hospital as a bilingual medical representative and worked for the IUPUI Solution Center and the Hispanic Business Council completing research on the challenges Hispanic businesses face in Indianapolis. Most recently, she assisted the World Languages and Cultures Department in refining the requirements for the translation studies certificate.

These stories are just a tiny sampling of the myriad volunteer activities our students engage in throughout their college years. Experience shows that these same students retain their community commitments throughout their lives. As our students, themselves fully engaged citizens, prepare for life, the generosity of many contributes to our community of learning.

Engaged in Giving

Just as Liberal Arts faculty, staff, and students are engaged in the community, community members and organizations are engaged with the School as volunteers, board members, and donors. This report celebrates the philanthropy of the nearly 1,500 individuals who supported Liberal Arts in 2007, highlighting the most extraordinary gifts and events and recognizing all of the School’s many supporters.

Engaged in Giving

Professor Bill Touponce, Center for Ray Bradbury Studies director, with Ray Bradbury: The Life of Fiction co-author Professor Jon Eller autograph their book at an oncampus reading.
The Center on Philanthropy celebrated its twentieth anniversary in 2007 with a series of celebratory events. In addition to receiving a $40 million endowment grant from the Lilly Endowment, the Center was a co-sponsor and major content provider for the 2007 The Spirit and Place Civic Festival titled Living Generously. Spirit and Place is managed by The Polis Center of the IU School of Liberal Arts and features events hosted by over 70 community partners during two weeks in November. The Public Conversation, attended by nearly 1500 people, featured Patty Stonesifer, Indianapolis native and CEO of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation; Dr. Bernice Johnson Reagon, composer, scholar, and founder of the Grammy Award-winning ensemble "Sweet Honey in the Rock"; and Nathan Dungan.

The School honored Karl and Barbara Zimmer with the 2007 Spirit of Philanthropy Award. The Zimmers served as co-chairs of the School of Liberal Arts’ highly successful Comprehensive Campaign, helping raise nearly $10 million, including their own gifts establishing an endowed chair in Intercultural Communication, and a fund to assist writing lecturers’ professional development. Both are active in the Indianapolis community, serving on numerous civic boards as well as the Dean’s Research Advisory Council. The Spirit of Philanthropy Award is IUPUI’s highest honor for acts of philanthropy.

We are pleased to honor the generosity of so many who understand that private gift support is vital to creating a productive learning environment. We thank all who have embraced the vision and mission of the IU School of Liberal Arts. You are an important partner in the future of liberal arts education at IUPUI.
IU School of Liberal Arts
Dean’s Council

Annual contributions of $100 or more to the IU School of Liberal Arts at IUPUI are recognized through the Dean’s Council. These individuals, whose gifts support the many programs, departments, and centers that constitute the Liberal Arts, are vital partners in higher education in the State of Indiana.

The School of Liberal Arts is pleased to recognize the following loyal alumni, friends, staff, faculty, and organizations for their important contributions.

Incoming freshman in the Liberal Arts sections of the IUPUI Bridge Program prepared for college and got to know the School through a scavenger hunt and each other during a variety of activities.
Liberal Arts and IUPUI students traveled to Scotland during the summer of 2007 with History faculty member Erik Lindseth (on left in both pictures) as part of a class entitled “The Scotland of Mary Stuart,” which focused on studying how physical and figurative “places” influenced Mary, Queen of Scots with regard to the social, gender, religious, economic fabric of early modern Scotland. The picture at left is at the ruined navel of the cathedral at St. Andrews. The above photo was taken from the top of a crag in the Holyrood Park called Arthur’s Seat (an extinct volcano core), the highest point in Edinburgh (about 250 m). It is the most prominent geographic feature in Edinburgh and overlooks the city. This view is looking south over Duddingston Loch and Prestonfield.

Liberal Arts staff and faculty kick-off the Campus Campaign, IUPUI’s annual fundraising event to support and encourage faculty and staff philanthropy.

Joanna Resler and Kara Peterson show off their door prizes. Mike Polites, faculty in Communication Studies and stand-up comedian, entertained the crowd at the event. Liberal Arts faculty and staff were again amongst the campus leaders in both dollars raised and number of participents during the 2007 Campaign.

The Joseph T. Taylor Heritage Society recognizes those who have made planned gift commitments to benefit the IU School of Liberal Arts at IUPUI through a variety of gift vehicles: life insurance, life estates, charitable gift annuities, charitable remainder trusts and bequests.

Their commitment and support helps shape the future of the School of Liberal Arts well into the future.

We have attempted to recognize all those who have notified the university that the School of Liberal Arts is included in their gift and estate planning. We apologize if we have failed to list anyone qualifying for the Taylor Heritage Society. If you currently have a commitment in place to benefit the IU School of Liberal Arts at IUPUI through a bequest, charitable remainder trust, gift annuity, pooled income fund, charitable lead trust, life estate, life insurance policy, retirement plan, or IRA, you are eligible for recognition in The Society. Please notify the Office of Development and External Affairs of the School of Liberal Arts.
