Rangazas described the proposal to reduce the amount of time faculty are required to keep student work to one year. Ward commented that if we want to hold less than the one-year time frame, we must put a statement on the syllabus. The proposal was unanimously approved. Rangazas initiated the discussion regarding the question of who owns faculty teaching evaluations. The committee proposed that SLA operate in line with Faculty Council guidelines. The proposal was tabled for discussion next fall.

b. Graduate Curriculum (Chair Bob Barrows).
Barrows presented the revisions to the minor in Philosophy reducing the required credit hours from 13 to 12 credit hours. The proposal was approved. c. Undergraduate Curriculum (Chair Kristine Karnick).
Karnick reported that the curriculum was indeed a “living curriculum” in that it is alive, growing, and changing. She reported that the committee had received 6 new course requests, 2 course changes, and 16 variable title courses. Next year’s committee will revisit the variable title approval process.

d. Faculty Affairs (Chair Herb Brant).
Brant announced that the committee had developed promotion criteria for lecturers and that the committee invited discussion, though they were not ready to put the document forward for a vote. Discussion ensued. Associate Dean Souch suggested that the faculty consider the context under which the criteria were developed. She stated that we have 50 lecturers and this document should be viewed as a parallel document for the criteria for promotion and tenure for tenure-track faculty. Burke added that the new campus guidelines had language that committed lecturers to conduct research on the scholarship of teaching and learning and to establish a national reputation. Spechler suggested that the wording read as “encourage and reward” for research rather than require research. Hovde noted the need to be clear on the distinction between policy and guidelines. Souch continued that the definitive guideline is the IU Academic Handbook. She cautioned that we put ourselves in a difficult position if we do not clarify our own guidelines as a school. Vermette acknowledged there were no written criteria for lecturers and she concurred that such should be developed. Harrington posed the question of how we define teaching beyond the classroom and suggested that the expectation for excellence, as it is currently stated, implies beyond the classroom. Whitchurch asked if input had been sought from lecturers in developing the guidelines. Brant responded that in fact lecturers had been and were participating in the development of the guidelines.

Brant announced that the committee had been working to refine the guidelines for P&T. The committee recommends changes to some language, procedures for faculty with joint appointments, directions for chairs, more extensive documentation on co-authored work, revision of the statement on Applied Research, standardized references to appropriate university documents, to name a few. He opened the floor to questions and comments. Souch offered clarification about the changes regarding consultation with the P&T committee when different areas of excellence are defined at different stages. Faculty were encouraged to review the changes online and make comments to the committee.

She also reported that a board of trustee member suggested that the university adopt a common core curriculum across all the campuses; it is thought it might address the transfer credit problem. Spechler added that the council is committed to develop 1) a conflict of commitment statement, 2) admissions standards that insist on a minimum core of 40 and giving campuses freedom, and 3) mission differentiation is being watched closely.
