Information for Double Majors or Potential Double Majors in Geography and International Studies

GENERAL INFORMATION:
Because of its interdisciplinary nature, the International Studies major includes coursework from a variety of academic disciplines within the School of Liberal Arts such as Anthropology, Economics, Geography, History, Political Science and World Languages and Cultures. It also includes courses that come from other schools such as the Herron School of Art and Design and the Kelley School of Business.

International Studies students who choose to double major may “double count” up to 9 credits from their other major toward their International Studies major. Such credits must fit within the other parameters of the International Studies major. Depending on the major and on the specific coursework taken, it may not always be possible to find 9 credits that will “double count” toward the International Studies major. Courses that are cross-listed and potentially fulfill more than one requirement in the International Studies major can only be counted in one area. Example: GEOG G110 can either fulfill the “Windows on the World” requirement or it can count toward the Global & Cross-Cultural Interactions thematic concentration. It cannot do both.

INFORMATION FOR GEOGRAPHY/INTL. STUDIES DOUBLE MAJORS:

GEOG G110 can fulfill the “Windows on the World” requirement. Alternatively, it can count toward the Global & Cross-Cultural Interactions thematic concentration or the International Relations thematic concentration.

GEOG G130 counts toward the Global & Cross-Cultural Interactions thematic concentration.

GEOG G310 counts toward the Global Environment thematic concentration.

GEOG G315 counts toward the Global Environment thematic concentration.

GEOG G321 counts toward the European area concentration.

GEOG G322 counts toward the European area concentration.

GEOG G323 counts toward the Latin America & Caribbean area concentration.

GEOG G324 counts toward the Latin America & Caribbean area concentration.

GEOG G331 counts toward the International Business and Economics thematic Concentration.

GEOG G355 counts toward the International Relations thematic concentration.
GEOG G421 counts toward the Development thematic concentration. Alternatively, it can count toward the Global Environment thematic concentration.

GEOG G424 counts toward the Africa area concentration.

GEOG G446 counts toward the Global Environment thematic concentration.

Any Geography course that includes an overseas travel component can fulfill the International Experience requirement.

Questions or additional information: Contact the Program Admin Nicole Collins at ndcollin@iupui.edu or 317-274-7611 or the Program Director Dr. Michael Snodgrass at misnodgr@iupui.edu.