Information for Double Majors or Potential Double Majors in Political Science and International Studies

GENERAL INFORMATION:

Because of its interdisciplinary nature, the International Studies major includes coursework from a variety of academic disciplines within the School of Liberal Arts such as Anthropology, Economics, Geography, History, Political Science and World Languages and Cultures. It also includes courses that come from other schools such as the Herron School of Art and Design and the Kelley School of Business.

International Studies students who choose to double major may “double count” up to 9 credits from their other major toward their International Studies major. Such credits must fit within the other parameters of the International Studies major. Depending on the major and on the specific coursework taken, it may not always be possible to find 9 credits that will “double count” toward the International Studies major. Courses that are cross-listed and potentially fulfill more than one requirement in the International Studies major can only be counted in one area.
Example: POLS Y219 can either fulfill the “Windows on the World” requirement or it can count toward the International Relations thematic concentration. It cannot do both.

INFORMATION FOR POLITICAL SCIENCE/INTL. STUDIES DOUBLE MAJORS:

POLS Y217 counts toward the Comparative Systems thematic concentration.
POLS Y219 can fulfill the “Windows on the World” requirement. Alternatively, it can count toward the International Relations thematic concentration.
POLS Y301 counts toward the Global Civil Society thematic concentration.
POLS Y311 counts toward the International Relations thematic concentration.
POLS Y314 counts toward the Global Environment thematic concentration.
POLS Y332 counts toward the European area concentration.
POLS Y333 counts toward the Asian area concentration.
POLS Y335 counts toward the European area concentration.
POLS Y336 counts toward the Asian area concentration.
POLS Y337 counts toward the Latin America & Caribbean area concentration.
POLS Y338 counts toward the African area concentration.
POLS Y339 counts toward the Middle East area concentration.

POLS Y346 counts toward the Development thematic concentration. Alternatively, it can count toward the Comparative Systems thematic concentration.

POLS Y349 counts toward the Comparative Systems thematic concentration.

POLS Y350 counts toward the European area concentration.

POLS Y356 counts toward the Asian area concentration.

POLS Y360 counts toward the International Relations thematic concentration.

POLS Y363 counts toward the Comparative Systems thematic concentration.

POLS Y367 counts toward the International Relations thematic concentration.

POLS Y370 counts toward the Middle East area concentration.

POLS Y374 counts toward the International Relations thematic concentration.

POLS Y375 counts toward the International Relations thematic concentration.

POLS Y376 counts toward the International Business and Economics thematic Concentration. Alternatively, it can count toward the International Relations thematic concentration.

POLS Y377 counts toward the International Business and Economics thematic Concentration. Alternatively, it can count toward the International Relations thematic concentration.

POLS Y378 counts toward the Global Civil Society thematic concentration.

POLS Y380 These are variable topics courses. Depending on the specific topic covered, Y380 may count toward various area and/or thematic concentrations within the International Studies major. Please consult the list of courses that fulfill the various area and thematic concentration requirements or get in touch with the International Studies program director with questions about a specific Y380 course.

POLS Y381 counts toward the European area concentration.

POLS Y382 counts toward the European area concentration.

POLS Y388 counts toward the International Relations thematic concentration.
POLS Y490 These are variable topic senior seminar capstone courses. Depending on the specific topic covered, Y490 may count toward various area and/or thematic concentrations within the International Studies major. Please consult the list of courses that fulfill the various area and thematic concentration requirements or get in touch with the International Studies program director with questions about a specific Y490 course.

Any Political Science course that includes an overseas travel component can fulfill the International Experience requirement.

Questions or additional information: Contact the Program Admin Nicole Collins at ndcollin@iupui.edu or 317-274-7611 or the Program Director Dr. Michael Snodgrass at misnodgr@iupui.edu.