Information for Double Majors or Potential Double Majors in Religious Studies and International Studies

GENERAL INFORMATION:

Because of its interdisciplinary nature, the International Studies major includes coursework from a variety of academic disciplines within the School of Liberal Arts such as Anthropology, Economics, Geography, History, Political Science and World Languages and Cultures. It also includes courses that come from other schools such as the Herron School of Art and Design and the Kelley School of Business.

International Studies students who choose to double major may “double count” up to 9 credits from their other major toward their International Studies major. Such credits must fit within the other parameters of the International Studies major. Depending on the major and on the specific coursework taken, it may not always be possible to find 9 credits that will “double count” toward the International Studies major. Courses that are cross-listed and potentially fulfill more than one requirement in the International Studies major can only be counted in one area. Example: REL R257 can either fulfill the Middle East area requirement or it can count toward the Global & Cross-Cultural Interactions thematic concentration. It cannot do both.

INFORMATION FOR RELIGIOUS STUDIES/INTL. STUDIES DOUBLE MAJORS:

REL R153 counts toward the Asia area concentration.
REL R212 counts toward the Comparative Systems thematic concentration.
REL R257 counts toward the Middle East area concentration. Alternatively, it can count toward the Global and Cross-Cultural Interactions thematic concentration.
REL R300 These are variable topics courses. Depending on the specific topic covered, R300 may count toward various area and/or thematic concentrations within the International Studies major. Please consult the list of courses that fulfill the various area and thematic concentration requirements or get in touch with the International Studies program director with questions about a specific R300 course.
REL R304 counts toward the Middle East area concentration.
REL R305 counts toward the Middle East area concentration.
REL R308 counts toward the Middle East area concentration.
REL R309 counts toward the Middle East area concentration.
REL R310 counts toward the Middle East area concentration.
REL R328 counts toward the Latin America & Caribbean area concentration. Alternatively, it can count toward the Global and Cross-Cultural Interactions thematic concentration.
REL R344 counts toward the European area concentration.
REL R352 counts toward the Asia area concentration.
REL R361 counts toward the Asia area concentration.
REL R366 counts toward the Global Civil Society thematic concentration.
REL R370 counts toward the Global and Cross-Cultural Interactions thematic concentration.
REL R379 counts toward the Global Civil Society thematic concentration.
REL R385 counts toward the Development thematic concentration.
REL R393 counts toward the Comparative Systems thematic concentration.

Any Religious Studies course that includes an overseas travel component can fulfill the International Experience requirement.

Questions or additional information: Contact the Program Admin Nicole Collins at ndcollin@iupui.edu or 317-274-7611 or the Program Director Dr. Michael Snodgrass at misnodgr@iupui.edu.