Exit Zero: The Documentary, a 2015 film by director Chris Boebel and writer/producer Christine Walley, tells a personal story of the lasting social and environmental impacts of deindustrialization and the key role it has played in expanding class inequalities in the United States. The film weaves a portrait of a family caught in its community’s struggles with job loss and pollution. Sponsored by the IU Department of Anthropology at IUPUI and the IUPUI Arts & Humanities Institute.
